Turning a totara post

This project concludes this week with almost all members completing a totara-post turning. The variations and interesting interpretations were a sight to behold. Here's a few more of completed works.

SHAUN O'REGAN is our TUESDAY's session newest member.

Shaun completed his very first woodturning project – a knockout bar and showed heaps of potential for his new-found outlet for leisure, creativity and fun . (that's woodturning of course)

Welcome aboard Shaun.

WEDNESDAY'S WONDERS

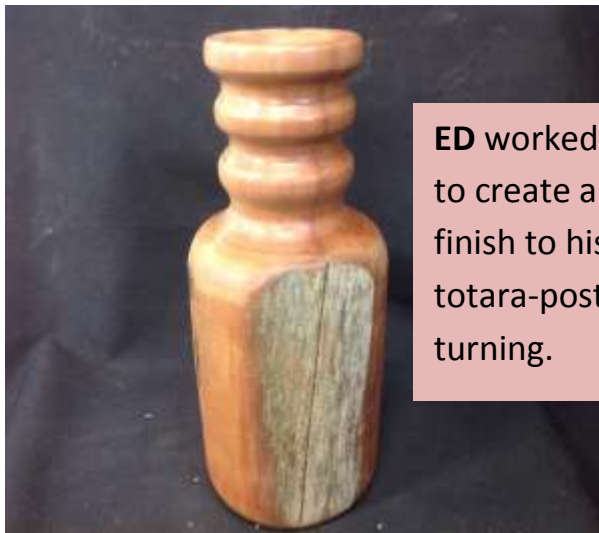

GIDEON has been busy in his workshop again as evidenced by these three turnings. A totara-post jug, a totara vase and a set of pepper mills.

ED worked hard to create a fine finish to his totara-post turning.

ED then found some time to complete an earlier project - a small bowl.

This blackwood beauty features an outstanding finish with flaw-free turning, producing an even transition from rim to rim.

A fine work of art from ROBERT.

TEAM THURSDAY'S TURNINGS

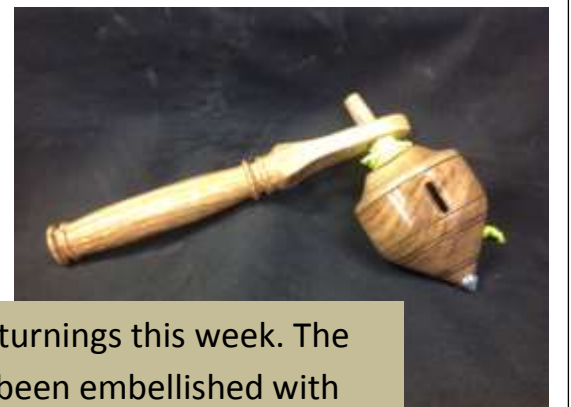

SPENCER produced a winner in this well-proportioned totara form complete with stopper-bung. Neat, natty and novel.

ROSS reckons he's not very creative but who would believe that after producing this excellent totara form.

COLIN produced two turnings this week. The totara-post form has been embellished with pyrography etchings and colour. The spinning top actually hums a constant note when spun right handed. Now Colin hopes to perfect the left-hand spin. A bit of a whiz eh!

CONGRATULATIONS!

DAVID, GLEN, AARON, and SCOTT have now completed the club's induction programme with the making of a pen. (CORMAC's turn next week)

Now the six projects in STAGE TWO await this keen and capable bunch.

TUTOR's note: Many special thanks to MURRAY who has very generously given of his time to ensure that the basic tools are sharp and ready for use, and at times, provided advice and guidance to club members. This support has been most appreciated especially as there are many new turners who have taken up the major proportion of my time. Being freed from those additional tasks that are so vital to club operation has allowed me to get on with the job of teaching the basic skills and to provide support and encouragement for success.

COLIN and DAVID M are also acknowledged for the support they have given to new turners.

Cheers, CLIVE

Go Waikato, and the ALL BLACKS!

Well that's the TT for this week – another week of turning fun especially with the whole-club totara-post project. Next week we will welcome yet another new member and so the club continues to prosper. Smiles all round.

Please note that there is no rugby to worry about this weekend so start your gardens as spring is just around the corner and Christmas the corner after that. Cheers, Clive
